

Down and dirty for a great cause

Two years ago, Todd Roselle of Diamond State Financial Group created the Delaware Mud Run, a team-based 5K obstacle course covered in mud. This year's Mud Run, which attracted 700 teams, raised $220,000 for the Leukemia Research Foundation of Delaware. The all-volunteer event, held on the last Sunday in September, gives 100 percent of funds raised to cancer research. Unlike most political ads, mudslinging is strongly encouraged at the Delaware Mud Run.

Greg Genovese, Chris Burgos, Stephanie Patterson and Jon Termonia helped Diamond State win first place in the corporate fund-raising category.

Team Mudagascar featured a penguin, lion and giraffe.

Todd Roselle (right) of Diamond State with his teammates.

A participant in the 2010 Delaware Mud Run dives into a pool of mud.

Hundreds of people watched the participants slug through the mud.